Preamble

- In light of climate change and given its geographical location and diverse topography, Algeria faces major challenges, including seismic hazards, floods, forest fires, and various technological risks. This conference serves as an international platform for exchanging expertise and enhancing the new Algerian approach, which has shifted from "disaster management" to "disaster forecasting and prevention," in line with the international Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction (2015–2030).
- In this context, universities play a pivotal role through scientific research, technological innovation, and the training of specialized talent capable of mitigating these risks and their environmental and human consequences, as well as fostering a culture of prevention and forecasting.
- This conference aims to provide a forum for scientific dialogue and knowledge exchange among researchers, experts, public authority representatives, and civil society actors in thisfield.
